den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Since 1995, Boston-area web developer Dale Cruse has been publishing websites for high-profile clients ranging from the U.S. Army to Bloomingdale's. He has been a guest lecturer at the Art Institute of New England is currently pursuing speaking opportunities. Contact him at <http://dalejcruse.com>. He is also the author of the Champagne blog Drinks Are On Me at <http://drinksareonme.net>. Lee Jordan is a web developer with a large collection of web technology acronyms on her resume that sound like the names of laundry detergents and cause glazed expressions in school children. She designs and maintains internal and external enterprise-level websites and web-based applications as part of a project team for a privately held technical services company. Her work includes proposing, writing, and editing web content and user guides people actually read. She began her career in 1997 as a web designer after graduating from Florida State University with a Bachelor of Fine Arts, where she swears that she missed at least one home football game while in the computer lab. Lee later convinced Seminole Community College to give her a Web Programming degree in 2003, even though her final project was a Java-based application that actually contained a usable help file. Web development topics or whatever she can think of at the time are posted on her blog at <http://leejordan.net>.
